YAMO Wins the Game.

The 29th annual production of YAMO, "Relax, It's Only a Game!" ran for eight sold out performances. Yamo '86 was, like all Yamo's, a combiation of old traditions and new ideas.

One new concept was to include the whole cast in the first act, which was a single skit, titled "Camp Yamo." Acting Company members, Fable Company members, dancers, and Chorus members all performed as campers. Crew even got on stage to play some of the visiting parents. Chorus and dance numbers were incorporated smoothly into the skit, making Yamo a much more unified show.

The second act was the customary compulation of short skits. The first one was the traditional "Newsroom Roulette," performed by the Acting Company. This year it was expanded with the addition of "Pre-Newsroom Roulette." This featured the Fable Company preparing the news desk for "air time." The Yamo Orchestra, Chorus, and Dance Company together performed the number "Black Tie." This was unusual, because ordinarily chorus and dance have separate numbers. This new combination worked well.

The Fable Company showed a lot of ingenuity when they rewrote their second act fable after it did not work during the first week of performances. The new fable worked well and the audience never knew it had been changed.

The Student Governing Board, the Assistant Governing Board, and Bruce Siewerth, Co-ordinating Director, created and directed an original show this year. Approximately 200 students participated in the show. This included all those who performed, directed, and built the set.

Jennie Kowal, a crew member, said that even though there were so many people in the show, "everybody worked really well together." Another crew member, Jeanne Trouti, agreed, "The spirit of Yamo kept all of the companies working hard. It all came together beautifully." The dedication of all participants really paid off. Yamo '86 was a terrific show.

RISE FOR EVANSTON

The Wildkits showed their spirit Homecoming Week as the theme "Send the Trevians Back to the Future" was chanted at the pep rally.

Homecoming week was successful with many different activities taking place. The hallway decorating contest started off the week. The senior's hallway won this contest. "Compared to last year, the spirit of the students improved 100%," said Student Council member Michelle Ungerleider.

Homecoming was enhanced with Spirit Week. There were various dress-up days including; College T-shirt Day, Cartoon Day, and Hippy Day. Pam Meyer, who dressed as a flower child for Hippy Day, said, "It was a lot of fun, but I had to keep telling people that 'I don't normally dress like this.' "

The ever-popular "Orange and Blue" Friday finished off the week. That afternoon all grades crowded into Beardsley gym to get psyched for the exciting weekend ahead. The pep rally also used the "Back to the Future" theme. Special effects such as smoke (dry ice) helped to heighten emotions.

Homecoming weekend began Saturday when early risers came for the pancake breakfast sponsored by the Boosters Club. Following the legendary Homecoming parade was the big football game against New Trier. The Wildkit's stands were packed. The Kits, unfortunately, lost a close game, 17-14.

The close game didn't seem to keep anyone from coming to the dance that night. Some changes were made in the dance procedures. One change was the dance taking place in the fieldhouse instead of Beardsley gym, the usual location. Also, two D.J.'s played music for the dance instead of just one. These changes seemed to have pleased everyone. At the dance, Sara Esrick and Elliot Hall were announced as the Homecoming King and Queen.

"I thought this year's Homecoming was a big success," added Michelle, "There was so much school spirit throughout the entire week."

Free Time? To Each His Own

When most students become juniors and seniors, they are given the privilege of having a free period. Forty-five minutes to do what you want. Unfortunately, there are rules to go with this freedom. Five minutes after the bell, students are not allowed into study centers without a pass. However, students are not allowed in the halls either. So, where can they go for 45 minutes?

When asked what they did during their free period, most students answered by saying that they go to the library or Michael Resource Center. A few, however, came up with interesting alternatives.

Junior Trina Johnson explained, "One time a friend and I spent all 7th and 8th periods dodging a security guard. He just kept chasing us. It was more fun than studying, and we never got caught."

Syd Weitlispach, junior, goes to paint and draw during his free period. "I go there because there's not much else to do. It's something creative I can do during time that would usually be spent socializing."

Some students who have first period free can get an extra hour of sleep. But others, like junior Seth Deysech uses his free time to catch up on cartoons. "I tape Thundercats and watch it in the mornings before school starts."

Junior Abby Shenker explained, "I just go home for 45 minutes and eat a lot and watch my soaps."

"Having a free period just helps me to use my time wisely," said Syd.

Many juniors have found it to their advantage to go to the College/Career Center, like Tracy Schmall. "The computers are good, and it's usually not that crowded, and it helps to find out what colleges you are interested in."

For many, a free period is a time to catch up on homework and to study. Some students rarely do their homework at home. They just wait until their free period to do everything.

Despite the lack of time, and the lack of places to go, students will eventually find a place to suit their own needs. Be it cartoons, soaps, or just wandering around until caught, students will do with their time what they want. As the saying goes, "To each his own."

Breaking Free

The Speech Arts Dept.'s presentation of Look Homeward, Angel was this year's fall play performed Dec. 11, 12, and 13 in the Upstairs Theater. The Pulitzer-Prize winning play, based on the novel by Thomas Wolfe, was written by Ketti Frings.

"The play was basically about breaking free from a possessive mother and home," said Caroline Wilkinson, who played the role of Eliza. "At the end of the play, Eugene (her son, played by Chris Trenkmann) takes a chance on independence and leaves home."

Junior Julie Dworkin, who played Helen, felt "the play was tough during rehearsals, but it really came together at the end. Both the in-school and night performances went well."

"The cast was really good," said Jason Thompson, who was on construction and shifting crew. "It really added to the general performance."

Even when the lights went out in the middle of a performance, the actors continued. "Because it was during a death scene in the play," said Caroline, "the audience thought that it was part of the show's 'ambiance,' so we kept acting and the play went on."

Overall, Look Homeward, Angel gave many high-quality performances that were enjoyed by students and staff. Valorie Peters, a teacher in the Speech Arts Dept., said, "It was one of the best plays I have ever seen performed here. The acting was superb, and the students had an abundance of talent."

MISDEMEANORS

This year will be most notorious, at least in terms of crime, for the shooting of junior Keith Woolridge in front of the school on Dodge Ave. This crime was not school-related, however. The bullet came from across the street and was aimed at someone else. Police suspected that the argument that had broken out prior to the shooting was gang-related. However, Keith was an innocent by-stander who happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time.

The administration's reaction to the shooting was to enforce stricter rules concerning the campus and to set up counseling for anyone who was upset by the shooting. However, as security officer Robert White explained, the incident was frightening but did not pertain to the school, and the students got over it quickly.

Keith, the victim of the shooting, agreed. "It was just an incident. It didn't have anything to do with the school itself." Keith added, however, that "the security guards aren't good enough. Now they're trying to be strict about the campus, but there's no need because now no one's across the street fighting. No one wants to be there now." Keith maintained that he thought the shooting would not have occurred had there been security guards outside in the first place.

The most prevalent crime this past year was locker theft. However, as White pointed out, most burglarized lockers were left unlocked rather than broken into.

Senior Joanne Nerenberg was one student who didn't have anything stolen from her locker. "Through carelessness we left the lock hanging on the handle. Thanks to one of the student welfare officers, my locker was security-locked and I was saved from much agony and distress.

I give the 'thumbs-up' to those hall monitors."

Overall, White saw no particular problem with crime at ETHS nor any one area that needs to be worked on. "There are a lot of people in this building, and we're talking about teenagers," he said. "There are bound to be fights and thefts. Students are students no matter where you go."

Trends in Fashion

Fashion, like perfume, is very different for different personalities. What kind of fashion statement do you like to make? Depending on who you are, here is what your closet probably contained in 1986-1987:

Classic and conservative — Nothing too risque for you. You prefer expensive clothes and like to look nice, for heaven's sake! Essentials in your closet this year start with the turtleneck sweater. these are in solid colors, and everybody, simply everybody, has one. Looking down at that closet floor, you might see those brown Bass loafers in one corner and your white Reeboks in another. Patterned Benetton sweaters are in, as always, this year. And feminity has made a comeback in the form of long skirts and lots of lace. What's hot in accessories? BIG is the word. You'll find big, chunky necklaces, big belts, and big bows in that long hair of yours. And, ooh la la, don't forget those scarves to wrap around your neck French-style!

Individualistic — You prefer being a bit different, yet there are still some fashion trends that you all have in common. Take leather jackets. Get them at Saks or get them at some obscure thrift store, but they're in your 1986 closet. Boots are also hot. Black and leather, combat or Mary Poppins ankle-high, they're there as well. Your closet might also contain a stockpile of long underwear: pastel, white, flowered, and snowflaked. Don't forget leggings. remember, you wore them under big shirts and Dad's fat, old sweater. You might also find long, full skirts to layer over long underwear and under fat sweaters to get that "Guess how much I weigh" effect.

General trends: Big, big, big. Big bags. Loop earrings are a must. Long skirts are in. Long hair is in. And remember, this was the year for ETHS boxer shorts. Wear 'em everywhere except gym class, kids!

Evanston Eats

After five days of wallowing in physics, algebra, and other wonders of the universe, weekends are an excellent time to get back to one of the fundamentals of existence: eating. Most ETHS students "eat out" at least once a week; sometimes it's carry outs from Hecky's or Domino's, the familiar food served at local hangouts, or the more expensive cuisine of ethnic restaurants.

Although the reaction of many people may be, "Restaurants in Evanston? There are no restaurants in Evanston!", connoisseurs of local eateries may say otherwise.

One of the most frequently mentioned places is Yesterday's. Yesterday's is found tucked away on a quiet corner of Sherman Ave. The menu consists of all the sandwiches and hamburgers that can be found on any typical American menu, but everything served there is delicious. Much of Yesterday's popularity is due to its atmosphere.

"It's really cozy," said one student. It's a good place to go with a group of friends.

Another popular restaurant was Fritz That's It on Chicago Ave. Sophomore Sharyn Tenn said, "A lot of food is served, and I always have some left over. There are really friendly waiters and waitresses. It's great to go on your birthday, because they sing to you!" They serve meals you take your time with.

Evanston's ethnic restaurants were also raved about. The best of these seemed to be Dave's Italian Kitchen and Los Palmos. "Dave's has the best Italian food," asserts David Rita, a senior. Marcia Brenner agrees. She likes Dave's not only for the food, but also "because it has a relaxed atmosphere." It's dusky with small, cozy tables. There are also rugs suspended from the ceiling. Dave's may be the possessor of the biggest singular meatballs known.

Los Palmos is a Mexican restaurant. "Of course the food is great," says junior Stacey Johnson, "But, I also like the decorations." They are authentically Mexican in flavor - high backed wood chairs and all.

Many more places were cited as personal favorites, but the ones mentioned above were the most popular.

RETURN TO RENAISSANC

It was one night in January 1987, when court jesters, sorcerers, and monks came alive again in Beardsley Gymnasium.

Freshman humanities students, on this night, were given the chance to experience life of the Middle Ages. "You get to experience medieval festivals instead of just watching them in the movies," said freshman Debbie Ungerleider.

The festive evening began with students marching in showing their new/old fashions to the parents. There were various costume ideas: jesters, evil sorcerers, priests, peasants, monks, and others. "A lot of people were wearing costumes reflecting on medievel and Renaissance times, and how they would have liked to have been during that time," said Milena Jovanovic.

Not only were the students sporting their styles, but some of the teachers dressed up as well. There were dances presented by both students and faculty as well as the legendary storytelling of English teacher Syd Lieberman.

Debbie said, "I thought the evening was really organized and everyone was in spirit."

The evening ended with everyone, including parents, gathering together to watch acrobats, maypole dancing, and juggling.

Milena said, "I thought it was educational and fun for the kids, because the parents came to see it and you got to see the teachers dancing.

Both Debbie and Milena believe that Medieval Revels is a great experience.

Debbie said, "I think that most students got a better understanding of what it was like in that time, and while learning a lot, we had a chance to have a good time with everyone."

As Medieval Revels night came to a close for another year and the jesters and sorcerers are once again words in a history book, the freshmen this year hold a fond memory of Medievel Revels night as well as a better understanding of that time period.

13, 14, 15 . . .

In an effort to be noticed by her peers, a young girl becomes the class clown. After finally being adopted, a young orphan dies of tuberculosis. Another young girl is notorious for telling wild stories. Let's not forget the young boy who guesses the exact number of coins in the jug.

No matter what the differences, all the main characters of the Freshman Production were thirteen, fourteen, or fifteen years old and could have been typical freshmen at Evanston Township. In fact, that's where the theme "13, 14, 15 Freshmen All" came from for this year's fifth annual production.

Similar to previous productions, this year's was done in "reader's theatre" style which employs the unique device of actor/actresses speaking directly to the audience rather than to each other. "To the uninitiated theatre goer the first reaction can be one of confusion," commented freshman English teacher Robin Hinderyckx, who directed the show. Nevertheless, "reader's theatre provides freshmen with a good introduction to acting. Also, there is more material to choose from in reader's theatre as compared to one act plays."

The reaction of the cast was one of approval. In the beginning Corrie Cockrell felt that the play would be just a lot of serious work. To her surprise she "even grew to enjoy the weekend rehearsals."

This year's production by freshmen and about freshmen was an adventure for the audience and fun for the cast.

STUDENT COUNCIL

"It's an organization interested mainly in the student body and community," said senior Jennifer Colleton.

"It's a good deal better and can only improve," said senior Michelle Ungerleider.

"They're not doing anything for us; their only concerns are themselves," claimed senior Michael Frolichstein.

These roundabout responses are directed at the Student Council, an organizational body of students wanting acceptance but condemned for its past record of lacking accomplishments.

Jennifer, president of Student Council, said the main goal of the group is to reach out to the students to learn what they want. "Some Student Council members walk through the halls each day and hear people complaining about some problem of the school," said Jennifer. "This and the vastly improved home base program are ways in which we can learn what the students want."

This home base program allows Student Council to inform the student body about what Student Council is, and lets the student body reveal what they want done. The program consists of representatives from senior English classes, junior history classes, sophomore GAP classes, and freshman advisories, and is "a real asset in only its second year," said Jennifer. "The kids are becoming more aware that home base exists and are responding to it well."

However, the Student Council also concerns itself with an equally weighty issue: communication between ETHS and the community. A branch of the Student Council known as the Civic Community Organization invests its time in soup kitchens, visiting nursing homes, Christmas caroling, and idea swaps with its North Shore neighbors. This branch is trying to bridge the generation gap and let Evanston know what the ETHS youth is doing for its community.

One of the main topics from the '86-'87 year, besides the second semester senior exams, renting out Bacon wing to small profit organizations, and the possibility of homerooms, is the widely acclaimed but unattended social activity — the dance. This year the Student Council cut the yearly dance agenda from seven to two in hopes that students would look forward to a dance as opposed to "dreading another school dance," as Michael put it.

So, one can see that the Student Council both commands and demands respect given the improvement and thoughtful considerations for present and future years at ETHS.

UP AGAINST THE ODDS

Where is the only place you can laugh at your teachers and not get in trouble for it? The biennial faculty production, of course!

Staff members performed Neil Simon's The Odd couple on April 22, 23, 24, and 25 in the Upstairs Theater. Bill Ditton and Bruce Siewerth reprised their fourteen-year-old roles as Oscar and Felix, two completely opposite divorcees sharing an apartment.

"It was enormously successful the first time," said Siewerth, "so we decided to do it again." One of the main purposes of the faculty production was to raise money for the drama department.

Another purpose of the play as to give students a chance to see a different side of their teachers.

"It's important for the students to know we do things other than teach," said Bruce Eddy, who played the part of Roy.

When they could get away from classrooms, department meetings, and conferences, some staff members chose to go to rehearsal instead of going home.

"It was a fun change of pace," said Eddy. "I got to do things I don't normally do, like drink and smoke. It was also a chance to develop friendships with other staff members I didn't know very well."

Overall, Siewerth found the production a gratifying experience. "As the old adage goes," he said, "if you can't do, teach.' This production gave us the chance to prove we could do both."

Of Dreams and Desperation

John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men was presented in the Upstairs Theater February 27, 28, and 29. The play tells the story of two men searching for a home, and, more importantly, for themselves.

Jeff Lieber gave a strong performance as George Milton, a man who is tied down to the responsibility of caring for Lennie Small, a responsibility he thinks he doesn't want. The role of Lennie was played very well by Kevin Will. Lennie is an often violent, dumb, and inarticulate man and George's companion in their search.

While the cast was excellent, the crew did a spectacular job in building the set for the production. Kevin Will felt the set "helped the actors feel they were actually by a riverbed or in a bunkhouse."

The music which was composed by Karl Thompson was also a vital part of the production. "The play wouldn't have been half of what it was without the orchestration of Karl Thompson," said Kevin. "The music beautifully bridged the gaps between scenes and didn't allow the feelings of the play to fade for a minute.

Bruce Siewerth, the play's director, even made some positive remarks regarding Of Mice and Men. "When Mr. Siewerth says, 'This is something special,'" said Kevin, "you know this is a good show."

LIVE ON MOTION AVE.

For a while, it appeared as though the long-practiced show wouldn't have a chance to get off the ground. However, two minor arson attempts in the Upstairs Theater, and several last-minute injuries weren't enough to stop the Esande cast members.

"The group really pulled together in the first minutes in the first show," commented senior Julie Gluck. Two of the three shows sold out.

Esande is the student-danced/choreographed show given every year. It offers a wide variety of music and dance, ranging from classical to hard rock, and jazz, modern, and ballet. This multicolored element of the show, said sophomore Sarah Sisco, "is exciting because the style of each choreographer is defined in the dance as well as in the music. This makes a very diverse program."

Each year the selection process gets tougher. Although previous dance experience is not mandatory, only 28 out of 70 people who tried out last year made it. The sponsor, Kathleen Neal, feels that the company "is equivalent to that of a small college" and she tends to pick the energetic, enthusiastic, and creative dancers.

Esande is unique in that the students get to choreograph all of their dances. Any cast member interested may choreograph his or her own dance, with the only restrictions being a once-over by Ms. Neal and a choice of only half the people they have in mind to do the dance with them.

"Choreography is great in the sense that one is able to express one's ideas, while building a lot of confidence in oneself," said senior Dana Wiley.

Joanne Nerenberg, another senior, agreed, saying that it was the choreography that made the experience most enjoyable for her.

This year's show was "a great success," said Neal. Many personal as well as group goals were achieved and surpassed when the show turned out to be, according to Julie, "far better than we had hoped."

Different Notes for Different Folks

Basically, musical interests don't vary that much. The kinds of music listened to these days depends on the person because there are so many different finds of music. People usually listen to the music that reflects their own individual personality instead of the music that everyone likes.

When asked what kind of music they like, seniors Louis Barlow and Mike Marcus both agreed that "country music is definitely out of the question."

Senior Richie O'Connor likes "progressive music," while Sara Wisby stated that her musical interest ranges anywhere from "60's rock'n'-roll to the group Velvet Underground."

"The emotion and energy in concerts are the most powerful forms of music," said Louis. Concerts can be seen just about anywhere, depending on the kinds of music you like.

"Concerts, for one, are educational — even if I don't enjoy it, I learn something. They are emotional and energetic," explained Mike.

Richie likes the fact that at concerts, "the people that go have the same interests — they are easy people to relate with."

Louis, Richie, Mike, and Sarah all agree that people at concerts do "whatever it takes to get into the music."

Everyone likes music whether they go to concerts or not. Music is a way to get excited or just to calm the nerves. It's the base of relieving your feelings. There are no bounds to the different kinds of music people listen to. Each song and/or verse is different in its own way, just like people, and that's what makes music so intriguing.

Some people like to sing along with a song and some like to hum to the music, while other people like to dance and the rest like to just listen. Music can be shared and used in so many different ways which, therefore, makes people's interest in music spectacular.

MEMBERSHIP leads to FRIENDSHIP

Despite the heavy workloads given to students throughout high school, many are able to find the time to sit back and enjoy life. Where? In youth groups.

There are many youth groups here in Evanston. Teenagers from other suburbs come out here to join. There are religious youth groups, sponsored by a church or synagogue and there are groups for only boys or only girls.

Young Life, a youth group well known throughout the school, consists mainly of Evanston students. "You just sing, talk, be with friends," explained junior Sara Rubin. A few ski trips are taken throughout the years, the goal being to meet people. There is also a Young Life summer camp, which welcomes members and their friends.

Beth Emet youth group, associated with Beth Emet synagogue, consists of about 30 Jewish teenagers from Evanston, Wilmette, and Skokie.

They hold fundraisers and go on seminars, one at the beginning of the year and again in the spring. They usually discuss Jewish issues and take field trips.

The B'nai Brith Youth Organization (BBYO) is the world's largest youth group.

This group takes trips to Colorado with the money earned by fundraisers such as selling tickets to Bulls games and selling coupons. AZA stands for the boys' group and BBO stands for the girls' group. Together, they are called BBYO.

Most youth groups have the same idea, to meet people and make friends, but it takes a lot to be in one. Time is needed, and you have to give some of yourself. But from what everyone says, you get back more than you give.

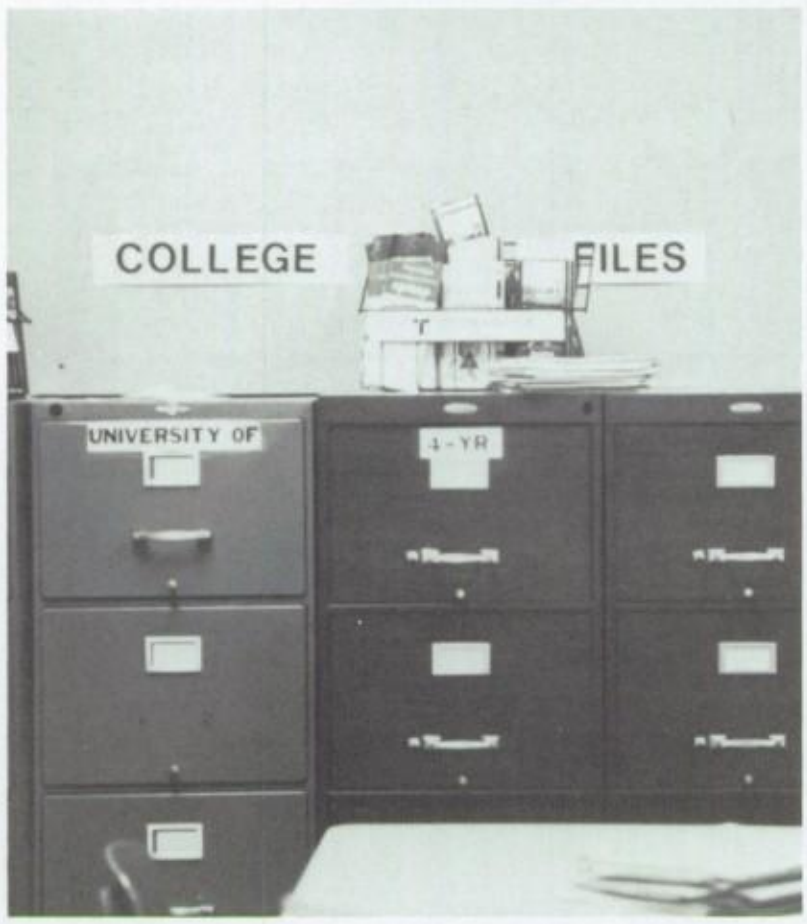
Planning Ahead



Do you plan to attend college but are having a hard time choosing the best school for you?

Are you having trouble finding all the resource materials needed to help choose a college?

Do you wish to speak to helpful adults about a higher education?

If you answered YES to any one of the above questions, then the College and Career Center is for you. Located on first floor Michael School, the College and Career Center contains materials aimed at clarifying events and questions that may arise while searching for the perfect school to spend the next four years of one's life at. The center contains computers, magazines, and adults to help sort things out.

The head of the Center, Bob Negronida, said, "About 80% of the students at ETHS plan to attend college. We help them become better decision-makers." Negronida said that in the past few years, there has been increased use of the Center, primarily because students have realized the competition and urgency to get into a good school is much higher. The adults don't do everything for the students. Instead they merely assist the student in finding out about himself so he in turn can decide what he wants in a school or a career. Choosing a college that fits one's needs, personality, and income is quite challenging.

Negronida helps these "information gatherers" just as the "library helps a research paper." He said, "Choosing a college requires planning, investigating , and lots of time."

So if you have time, check out the College and Career Center. It could change your life.

Seniors Visit Russia

"Before I went to Russia, everyone was really negative about the 'commies' over there. I found that the trip to Russia shattered the myths," began Joanna Gibbs, recalling her experiences as a visitor to the Soviet Union. During spring break, Joanna and 37 other ETHS seniors enrolled in Russian history travelled to the Soviet Union with their Russian history teacher, Patricia Peterson, to see the country they had read and heard so much about.

"When we first got there, we were pretty intimidated by the airport. We got out of the plane and there was no one there except Russian soldiers," Carol Adair recalled about her first steps on Russian soil.

"I went with an open mind," Kristin Visovatti commented, "and I learned more than I ever would have imagined."

"Meeting the people" was the phrase many used to describe what they felt as the best part of their trip. Joanna, and many others, felt that "the teenagers we met didn't have attitudes like 'You American imperialist pigs!' They were just like us."

According to Kristin, "We talked to them about what kinds of music we liked, fashion, religion, politics, everything. We'd be talking about boys one second; then the subject would change to some world issue."

Jessica Kysiak was most impressed by the architecture and buildings they saw on their tours. "The buildings were very different — pastel and European. I got a feeling for the country and for the people."

Most of the travelers also commented on how concerned the people they met were about peace. Carol felt that "every citizen was incredibly worried" about peace in the world. "The guys we met were scared about going into the army."

Joanna added, "They are scared about going to war in Afghanistan. Afghanistan is like our Vietnam. They don't want to be drafted to be sent over somewhere to fight."

"They are much more patriotic than the U.S.," noted Kristin, "They love 'Mother Russia' and are optimistic about Gorbachev. The only thing they really criticized about their country is the rule forbidding travel. They would love to be able to visit the U.S. Kristin pointed out that there was some anti-American propaganda, like a snake strangling itself in greed. However, this propaganda did not mar her impression of the Soviet Union.

"I felt so much respect and admiration for these people who have been through so many wars, bad leaders, and hard times. They love their country."

Most of the travellers agreed with Jessica when she said that the worst part of the trip was leaving.

ALL THAT JAZZ

Jazz pianist Dorothy Donegan's appearance at the ETHS auditorium was the only worthwhile assembly that I've ever attended during my twelve years of public education. Her performance, though, really deserves higher praise than that statement gives it.

While Donegan has been playing nightclubs, where highschoolers (especially an auditorium full of them) are a rare sight, she had no problem appealing to everyone in the crowd of mixed ages.

She gained the audience's favor by mixing electrifying piano work with entertaining lessons in jazz history. While the names of the jazz figures that Donegan mentioned were only recognized by a few of the older faculty members (with the exception of Michael Jackson, who is not really a jazz figure and whose name was received with a few boos), she showed that jazz will never become out-dated when it's played with the emotion that Donegan showed.

Donegan was also the only person who has ever caused everyone, even the freshmen, to fall under her complete control at an assembly. This was because instead of making demands for silence, she encouraged the audience to yell, dance in the aisles, and join her for a few dance steps on stage.

The only unfortunate part of the assembly was the ETHS Music Department piano that Donegan had to use. Every so often, a beautifully played chord would become muted by the malfunctioning equipment. The liveliness was there, though, and that's really the most important item for a ninety minute assembly at the end of the school day.

JAZZIN'

The biennial Jazz Spaghetti Dinner took place on Friday, May 1, in Michael Cafeteria. The evening began with the Dixieland Combo playing in the lobby while guests munched on hors-d'oeuvres. When the people ate dinner, they were entertained and served by members of the bands and choir. Jazz Band II played first, followed by a new addition to the dinner lineup — the Jazz Choir, which was directed by Ms. Rebecca Winnie. Jazz Band I played last, finishing up the evening.

"The Jazz Spaghetti Dinner was more relaxed than the regular Jazz Concert," said trombone player Jeremy Perney. "It's less formal." The comfortable atmosphere was enhanced by students playing both parts — that of entertaining and being entertained.

"It's a different type of performance," agreed Mr. Myron McReynolds, director of the two Jazz Bands and the Dixieland Combo. "There's no specific audience. Everyone gets a chance to hear each other play."

Guests and performers alike enjoyed the program. According to Jeremy, "There was a schedule of five songs to be played by Jazz Band 1; instead we played fifteen. It was lots of fun. There was more freedom in what we could do."

For this night, Michael cafeteria was transformd into a jazz night club. It was a place for wining, dining, and entertaining. Well, maybe not wining — the wine carafes were filled with kool-aid.

MUSIC

The ETHS band of 1986-87 was both similar and dissimilar to those of past years. It was dissimilar in that it consisted of new faces and new music, but it was similar to recent past years in that it reflected the continuing decay of the music program in Evanston's school system.

There were, once again, far fewer people participating in the band — a trend, it seems, that will continue into next year — and, also, far fewer people capable of doing so. Why? Because the school system in Evanston and elsewhere in the country have, for the most part, abandoned any effort to help or propagate music in the schools. Music is simply not one of the priorities any more and it shows, both in the amount of participation and in the results of what participation there is.

So where does the blame really fall? The problem is not primarily in the high school or its music department, though they must take some responsibility for the waning interest in music at the high school. The school board of District 65 also has to take some of the blame. The blame mainly falls, however, on the shoulders of those short-sighted people in both the state and national governments who have consistently cut back on funds for music in Illinois schools. They have cut back on funding for music programs in Evanston schools, yet somehow expect that they will remain decent. We have, obviously, seen otherwise, and it is time someone took the stand about it.

A TIDAL REVUE

Probably one of the most unusual annual shows at ETHS is the synchronized swimming show put on by the Aquettes. This year the show was entitled "A.K.A. Aquettes." The show's numbers were performed to music that had to do with names, ranging from "Sarah" to "Amadeus" to "Mama Africa."

Tryouts for the show were held in late February. Everyone who auditions can participate in the show after rehearsals and synchronized swimming training, although usually only good swimmers try out. Many of the Aquettes are swimming or diving team members. The show is organized so that newer members participate in group numbers and more experienced members perform solos, duets, and trios, as well as help choreograph the show. This year there were two solos, one by sophomore Michelle Russell and one by senior Kristin Murphy. There were also three duets and one trio number in "A.K.A. Aquettes," as well as many large group numbers, including one all-male number.

During the week before the show, rehearsals sometimes lasted until 11 P.M. All these rehearsals were necessary, since many of the new Aquettes did not have experience in synchronized swimming. They first had to learn the basic skills and then put them together in the group numbers. Wendy Olson, a sophomore, felt that the long rehearsals paid off. "After a lot of hard work, the show really pulled together. It turned out to be a great show," she said. Wendy, a second-year Aquette, also said that Aquette sponsor Joanne Shalk felt that this show was the best show in years. The costumes were very good, the music was interesting and diverse, the choreography was excellent, and there was a large group of enthusiastic swimmers in this year's production. ETHS's annual Aquette show is truly a fun, non-competitive, and enjoyable show to watch or perform in.

Write On!

"Beneath the tides of time and sleep, strange fish are moving," was the response of one writer to a question on this year's Writer's Showcase application. The question was, "Anything we should know about life?" Another writer's answer aptly sums up the Writer's Showcase philosophy: Be extreme.

Writer's Showcase is a student-produced, written, and performed show. Any student may submit three pieces.

These pieces are read by all the members of the Writers' Showcase Board. The board then decides which pieces will go in the show. Since there are usually about five hundred pieces submitted, there is a lot of reading to do! How does the board decide which pieces to use? According to junior Heather Smith, next year's executive chairperson, "We do a lot of arguing about each piece."

Junior Erica Michael, another board member, pointed out that Writers' Showcase "likes to have a variety of pieces so it's not all serious or all humorous."

Erica likes being on the Board of Writers' Showcase because "its interesting to read all the pieces people submit."

Heather also likes to read the pieces, but for her, the high point of being on the board is "violently debating the merits of each piece."

This year's show was called, "All's Fair in Love and Showcase." One audience member found the show "interesting and impressive." She also felt that "many of the pieces showed insight and expressive ability."

Senior Jeff Lieber, one of the show's directors, felt that the show "was a myriad of feelings that showed the true identity of the students of ETHS." Gesturing wildly, he continued, "Like the drugs of the sixties, it enabled us to find our souls and identify reality. Only Writers' Showcase isn't illegal." Wiping a tear from his eye, he ended with, "It was a show that, once you'd seen it, you could never be truly happy again."

Who Dunnit?

Summer Stock Murders, ETHS's spring play, was put on in the Upstairs Theater May 29, 30, and 31. The three act play was described as "Three plays within a play" and "A comedy/musical/mystery" by cast members.

"It was so much fun to be in because it's such a twisted play," said junior Beth Cappo, who played Julianne Barrington. "There are a lot of sick little twists in the plot and twisted humor."

"It's the kind of play you don't have to take seriously," said junior Caroline Wilkinson, who played Constance Darchet. "Once the technical things are worked out, you can go on stage, relax and have fun with your character. It's not high drama."

"It was fun to work on because it was a challenge," explained senior Lindley Curry, who was Mara Moorehead in the play. "We were the first people to do it aside from the original cast, so we had nothing to go by except the script."

The play originally opened at the Theater Building in Chicago, and the play's authors worked with director Bruce Siewerth to tailor the show for its ETHS production. The authors also came to see how the finished product worked out. "It was a big ego boost when the authors came and had nothing but praise." said Lindley.

The rest of the audience responded positively to the play as well. "By the end of the play, the audience really wanted to know who the murderer was," said Caroline. "When the question came up, 'Who did it?' you could hear the audience whispering to each other who they thought it was.

"It's really fresh theater," agreed Beth. "It's better than going to see Guys and Dolls for the 98th time."

Artistically Inclined

The first-floor art wing at ETHS serves as a sort of gallery where students can display their works for their schoolmates. For some students, their drawings and paintings serve only as a fullfillment of the fine arts credit required for graduation. For other, more serious student artists, however, their work means a lot more than just a grade.

"It doesn't really matter to me what people think of me," said senior Frank Scratch. "But I really care about what people think of my work."

"I love being creative and expressing myself through art," said senior Judy Grossman. "I can express whatever emotion through art — anger, frustration, pain. It's better than punching someone out."

Such self-expression is, for many student artists, an opportunity to release emotions that would never surface through other activities.

"I'm not good on stage," said sophomore Siena Scarff. "I can't be the center of attention — it drive me nuts. But I can be behind the scenes and still show how I feel. That's why I prefer to be behind the camera or canvas or whatever."

"Art gives me a feeling that I have a talent that no one else had," said senior Andria Marcussen. "It's not like accounting where everyone learns and knows the same thing. With art, every work is different. It's not like two and two is four. Everyone's answer is different."

While art can release a lot of tension and be very satisfying, being an artist can be very demanding in terms of time and involvement.

"I'm not as open as I could have been because I spend a lot of time worrying about art," said Frank. "I'm not as involved in other things as maybe I should be. It (Art) takes a lot out of you, but you get a lot out of it, too."

All the student artists interviewed expressed an interest in having a career in art or an art-related field. They all pointed out, however, that it is difficult to be a successful artist, and none of them found the starving artist image particularly appealing.

"I've always hoped to be successful," said senior Marcia Brenner. "But I can see the 'suffering for your art' and all that because the field is very competitive. And then people have their own opinions, so you're not only working for yourself but you have to please the public as well. That's the hard part."

A Golden Year

"I really like Evanston." This sentence describes Superintendent Robert Goldman's attitude toward his first year at ETHS.

Being new to such a huge school, Dr. Goldman feels his first year has been quite a success. "I've been extremely pleased. People here want to work with me," he said.

Goldman had been interviewed long before he actually came to ETHS, so he had a lot of information about the school. He feels there is a very good faculty and staff and that "there is room for success for all students. The community wants something special. They have big expectations."

Goldman feels very strongly about the new policy on attendance. He explains, "The more kids that are in class, the more they will learn. We shouldn't have this lack of attendance."

Another big change that has been made under Goldman's direction is that of the grading system. Goldman feels it is important to have students work to their capacity. "Having exams allows kids not to study," he explains. "It's not a system; they can't flow by. I'm not asking students to do what they can't do, but what they can do."

Goldman feels that students are exceptionally lucky to be attending ETHS. He advises, "Take advantage of everything at this institution. You're still at that age. You don't know what will happen."

Goldman has had a successful first year here at ETHS. He has made a point of letting people know that he is concerned with the welfare of the school. He says, "Enjoy the high school days. You are as alive as you ever will be." If Goldman keeps up this optimistic view of the school, we will all be in store for good years at ETHS.

Badminton

Three years ago, Coach Shirley Nannini set three goals for her freshmen to accomplish before graduating. These goals were: to be the conference champs, the sectional champs, and to finish in the top three in state. This year, the team accomplished the third and final goal with a tie for third place in state competition. The team also won 75% of all of their dual meets, finishing with a 12-3 record, and placed second in conference. Another great achievement of the team was the win in the Evanston Invitational, the "mini-state" in badminton.

This is Nannini's tenth year coaching, and she feels that the girls "get better every year." However, many players admitted that they harbored doubts coming into this season. "We had lost six seniors and had to replace over half of our team," said senior Amy Geraldson, "but everyone really pulled together and supported each other until we had all reached our potential."

"One of the reasons for our success and teamwork was that we did a few things together outside practice," said junior Liz Goodwin. One such example was a team pizza party, when all didn't go as expected. A seven year-old boy scout tried to pick up team member Sura Dubow, and teammate Debbie Skydell thought that pepperoni was a kind of fish

"This kind of attitude and enthusiasm helped carry the team through the rough times," commented senior Sara Esrick.

Nannini saw a lot of growth in her team this year, both mentally and athletically. She was especially pleased with the state team, singles players Geraldson and Esrick, and the doubles team of senior Jonelle Niffenegger and Goodwin. Geraldson placed third, Niffenegger and Goodwin placed in the top twelve, and all contributed crucial points in the state competition.

Although the team is losing four top seniors, the future is bright. "After seeing the amount of talent that emerged this year, and the dedication of the players, I think that we'll have a good season next year," said Liz Goodwin.

"They're a terrific group of girls," observed Nannini. "There's a lot of potential and determination."

Baseball

"If we didn't have so many inconsistencies in the season, we would've been primed for post-season play," figured senior Brad Benson, co-captain with senior Kevin Foster on this year's baseball squad.

"We started off slow, got better, fell, got better, fell, and were doing well by the end of the season," said Coach Kenneth McGonagle. "It's just a shame that we fell again in the last game."

The Kits finished their season with a heart-breaking 4-2 loss to a stable LaGrange Lions ball club. "We had men in scoring position in six of the seven innings, but our hitters failed to produce," explained McGonagle. "But we didn't lose offensively, we lost defensively which was also our major weakness all year."

The Kits placed fourth in the Central Suburban League South Division, with a 15-15 record, behind three teams tied for first place with 16-14 records. "We were right up there until the end of it," said McGonagle.

The "Boys of Summer" did have their share of ups and surprises throughout the season. Seniors John Luczak, David Stamps, and Foster each were chosen all-conference. Senior first-baseman Jeff Raedle and senior catcher Bobby Murphy each had a top season. And most importantly, according to McGonagle, "We had a spirited bunch of kids who worked well as a team."

Boys' Basketball

From the way things had been going in recent years, the common notion was that ETHS basketball was becoming a dynasty of strong teams. Then the 1987 boys' basketball team reared itself and undoubtedly put such a notion back in the closet.

The Kits began the season quickly with a 5-2 record which trailed off to a nightmarish 7-10 when nine key players were caught with alcohol and suspended from the team without play or practice for up to eight games. As soon as those players were allowed back, the Kits took charge of themselves and blazed through conference winning five of seven games, enabling them to compete in the regionals. From there, the cagers bullied their way through sectionals to super-sectionals, where their state finals hopes were demolished by Oak Forest in a 62-60 loss. However, their post-season record was an admirable 4-1.

Though the Kits' hopes for a state playoff berth were dashed for the first time in recent years, Coach Mike Hart feels the season was very valuable both mentally and physically. "We saw what happens when you break the rules. The (alcohol-related) incident has taught our older players and our younger players a little discipline," claimed Hart. "The other good that came from it was the less-experienced players got some varsity- level experience, which will definitely aid the '88 team."

Players who led the team like Sidney Pointer, Lonnie Ball, Yakim Fleurima, Lennox Forrester, and Juvon McGarry put in their best efforts to get the team to its apex, though all were upset.

"Coach Hart figured we'd have an excellent chance of getting to State and avenging our loss to King last year," said senior forward Sid Pointer. "It just didn't happen, but we had fun trying."

Throughout the season, Evanston fans claimed, "They're letting us down." But according to Coach Hart, "Evanston '88 will be the team and the time to watch. "Then is when we'll show everyone what we've learned."

Boys' Cross Country

Running is tough, and that was the key word this season for the boys' cross country team. They had a tough new coach, Donald Michelin, who is a P.E. teacher from Haven Middle School. In his first year coaching cross country, Coach Michelin instituted the "New Regime," as co-captain Karl Thompson put it. "Practice was much harder this year," Thompson said. "He made us run farther but more importantly, much faster. They were real quality miles."

Coach Michelin commented that "other suburbs take cross country very seriously. In some places it's as big as football. In order to compete in our conference, we had to shape up. That even meant practice in the summer. Athletes are made during the off season; teams are made during the season. We showed we could compete."

This year's team had some very strong juniors, including Sean Ahern, Chris Negrin, and Mark Fennell, who will be next year's tri-captains. Behruz Afshar, co-captain Tony Davis, and sophomore Rich Schroeder also contributed. The team worked hard and the scores and mental attitudes were up.

The varsity team placed fourth in its conference, while the sophomore team finished third and the freshman team took second in their conferences.

When asked what he's looking forward to most next year, Coach Michelin said with a smile, "Besides not being a rookie, I want to bring championship fever back to ETHS."

Girls' Cross Country

Pant, sigh, inhale, exhale. All of this goes along with being on the girls' cross country team. Obviously all of the hard work and pain paid off, as the widely-seen sweatshirts declaring, "No Guts, No Glory" go right along with the 1986 team spirit.

"This year has been very strong and it seems as if it gets better every year," said varsity cross country runner Susan Adler.

Susan recalled that the greatest win was over New Trier, when Evanston came in second and made it to state while New Trier stayed back.

"The first time we ran against them they creamed us," said Susan. "But the second time we did just fine."

Tina Zordin, a freshman on the team, almost made it to state. Susan said that Tina will be someone to look for in the future.

Even though there is "glory" on the team, Susan thinks that one thing the team should work on is "being able to work under pressure, because then maybe we'll win more competitions because there won't be as much tension."

Football

Frankly, it was a tough year for the varsity football team. Their overall record was 4-5, 2-3 in conference, but they played four of the top 15 teams in the state. Coach Tom Powers stated that they were a good team, but there was trouble with the offense.

"The main problem was the offense scoring touchdowns. We moved the ball well, but we had trouble crossing the goal line. There were no problems on defense." They only gave up fifteen touchdowns all year, and all games were close.

The team was also unlucky, as they lost six former starters, before the first game had ended. Unfortunately, four were ineligible, and two were injured. Also, the starting quarterback dislocated his shoulder in the fourth game, and the starting tackle broke his hand in a game against New Trier.

Despite the lackluster offense and the injuries, the future looks bright for the Kits. The combined record of the freshman and sophomore teams was 21-3-1. The sophomore team was so good that WLS News did a feature on them, and they're considering making a video.

"The offense should be able to score more points, and hopefully we'll maintain our defense," exclaimed Powers.

He summed up the season by saying, "This season was filled with struggle and frustration, but next year always promises new and better things."

GOlf

"This year's golf team was a lot of fun, despite the losing season," said third-year player Julie McCollough. Although neither the girls' team nor the boys' sophomore or varsity teams won a game, the season was still enjoyable because of the spirit and teamwork the players showed.

Second-year player Colin Smith explained, "We were always rooting each other on and encouraging everyone to do his best."

Girls' coach Richard Mahoney felt that the losses were partially due to the competitiveness of the other teams. "The teams we play take golf very seriously, but we like to make the game fun," he said. "In addition, most of the Evanston players have very little golf experience."

Senior Jeff Raedle agreed. "For most of the players, this is the first time they've taken golf seriously, but the other teams play year round at country clubs and in tournaments."

First-year player Heather Gomik explained, "Before this season, I had never really played golf, but it seemed like fun and I wanted to try it. I learned a lot about the game and also had a good time."

The teams feel they have made considerable improvement and hope that next season will be more rewarding.

Boys' Gymnastics

"Gymnastics is the best mix of individual and team sports," said senior Solomon Woods about the advantages of being on the boys' varsity gymnastics team. "When you're actually competing it's as an individual, but to do well you need a complete team to help each other."

This year the team had to support each other quite a bit. Senior Jim Round, who took first place in all-around competition at the state finals last year, did not return to the team but joined the USGF instead. "He was trying to move on to bigger and better things," said Solomon.

The team started off in bad spirits, expecting not to do very well since its best member was gone, according to Solomon. "But we improved quite a bit. We placed third in conference, which is almost where we were last year. We didn't expect to get that far," Solomon added.

Injuries did not help the team, either. "There were only four seniors this year and we had a lot of injuries," said Solomon. "The juniors had to make up for a lot, so there were a lot of improvements."

Senior Rodney Pointer placed first in vault at the state finals, with junior Mark Sussman taking second.

"At first joining the team was just a group thing, but then it became an individual thing," explained Rodney. "I wanted to get in shape and when I worked out I realized I was getting muscles. So instead of lifting (weights), I just worked out.

"Most of the original group faded away, but me and this other guy stuck around and we got pretty good," he continued. "We're both going to compete in college. There's no professional gymnastics or anything — college is it. So I've pretty much reached my goal."

As far as the team was concerned, Rodney felt that, "We did pretty well. We didn't reach the goals we had in mind, but we had a lot of injuries."

Girls' Gymnastics

The judge at the Evanston Invitational, affectionately nick-named Pee-Wee, offered senior Co-captain Sarah Raisner good luck. With a laugh, he added that everyone he had offered luck to that day had been injured. Sure enough, on her first vault, Sarah chipped a bone in her ankle and was out of commission for a few weeks.

"It seems we would be rolling along and then someone would get injured. That's a big setback," said Coach Patty O'Grady.

"Injuries aside, we had a very good season," Assistant Coach John Brinkworth commented. "Everyone improved. When she was healthy, Sarah was a great performer. Junior Megan Hiller developed into a well-rounded gymnast, qualifying for Sectionals in the All-Around. Sophomore Missy Manning made excellent progress on beam and emerged as a stylish and graceful performer. Also, Katie Squires was a pleasant surprise with a lot of talent as a freshman.

"It's not winning or losing, it's how you play," Coach Brinkworth continued. "Everyone on the team worked hard and everyone supported one another. I haven't seen such team loyalty in a long time."

Coach O'Grady agreed. She said everything was "for the good of the team. When Missy hurt her knee, Sarah stepped right in without warming up. At New Trier, Katie ignored her back spasms and competed. They didn't give it a second thought. The attitude was great and the enthusiasm was high even for small accomplishments."

The hard work paid off at New Trier, where they posted a season high of 128 against the rival Trevians. The competitive atmosphere got everyone psyched up.

"Even though we didn't win, New Trier was a great meet. We got to see friends we worked out with over the summer and note their improvement. It was fun!" Co-captain Megan Hiller said.

"Since we were a small team, we were better friends and closer," said senior Trina Janes. "The team is young and optimistic."

Coach Brinkworth summed up the season by saying, "We experienced the thrill of victory and some agonies."

Boys' Soccer

"This season is one I really would like to forget," stated assistant varsity coach Alexander. Coach Alexander continued, "We outplayed most of the teams we lost to or tied. The kids really tried had; we just had tough luck!"

The 1986 varsity soccer team finished the regular season with a 2-6-4 record. They ended the year as the third placd team in their division. "We easily could have had a better record, and finished in first place," said sophomore starter, Robert Levin. Levin proceeded, "We had a lot of late chances to win or tie games. We just couldn't put the ball in the net."

Despite the "tough luck" season, the team played well in post-season tournament. After two easy wins over St. Gregory and Chicago Latin, the Kits were challenged by Gordon Tech. The game was scoreless after regulation and three overtimes. Senior goalie Eric Barnett then came through with two clutch saves to ensure the victory of 1-0 for the Kits.

The Kits next opponent was rival New Trier. New Trier opened up the game with an early lead. The Wildkits just couldn't capitalize on the opportunities given to them. They lost a heartbreaker, New Trier 1, Evanston - 0.

Although the starting team was mostly seniors, coach Alexander is confident the Kits will have a good squad next season. "The sophomores were strong, and our juniors should come through next year." With the varsity soccer program as strong as it is, coaches Chmela and Alexander are almost guaranteed a strong team in 1987.

Girls' Soccer

The girls' soccer team had a super season, placing fourth in the state and finishing with a 14-5-2 record. "We played really well this year. It was an up-and-down season, but all our losses went to excellent teams," said varsity coach Bob Wilheim.

One of the highlights of the season came when Evanston almost broke Maine South's 72-game winning streak. The Wildkits only lost 2-3. Winning the sectional meet against Niles North was also a big kick for their confidence. Last year Niles North beat Evanston to put them out of state contention.

"Our Evanston team is well-respected, and they earned that," commented coach Wilheim. They were rewarded by having six members receiving special acknowledgment. Senior captain Claudia Gerth, senior Lettie Williams, juniors Tina Fazekas, Sabina Gerzig, and Mimi Plauche, and freshman Erica Handelman were members of the all-conference team. Handelman also made all-sectionals, while Gerth and Fazekas made the all-state team.

Many aspects made the season memorable, but senior Julie Quinlan thought it was special because, "we were like a family. It was really fun to play soccer with people you enjoy being with. I think that's partly why we did so well."

Coach Wilheim agreed. He thought it was really nice coaching a team that was so close to each other. "They sacrificed a lot too," he said. All 22 girls gave up Memorial Day weekend, and the seniors came back the day after prom to play. "They gave it a lot this year, and next year I think we'll do even better," Wilheim said. "We have a young team with a strong nucleus in the midfield returning."

Wilheim thought the whole season was a pleasing experience. "And" he smiled, "after we recorded our 100th win in Evanston girl's soccer history, it only cost me McDonalds!"

Softball

This year's softball team did much better than in past years. The varsity record was 7-14, which gave the team a finish of fourth place in conference, but according to senior co-captain Carolyn Wolff, "The record didn't show how good we really were. Many of the games we lost were very close."

One reason for the team's improvement was new Head Coach Julie Colwell. Julie McCullough, also a senior co-captain, said, "We came into this season with high expectations. We were looking forward to new feelings and a new attitude with Coach Colwell."

"I was looking for a positive approach to the season," said Colwell. "I set goals for better communication and skill/strategy development, and I think we accomplished them."

Another important aspect of the season was the team spirit. Wolff said, "The team was very dedicated and really worked hard."

"All the players improved in their skills and communication. It was a very positive season," said Colwell.

One of the major accomplishments this year was giving New Trier pitcher, Maggie Moline, her only earned run of the entire '87 career. Other exciting events were beating Waukegan East 18-17, beating Buffalo Grove 8-7 in extra innings, and having a no-error game against Maine South.

Colwell feels that next year's team will be even better. "The JV team this year was very strong, and many players are going to camps this summer." Although eight seniors are graduating, Colwell still feels confident.

The JV team this year finished with a 7-14 record and fourth in the conference. Starting catcher Karen Chambers said, "We had a lot of fun this year, but also improved a lot in our skills and teamwork."

The freshman team had a new coach this year, Cynthia Bumbry. They also finished fourth in their conference with a 6-10 record and are hoping for next year to be even better.

Boys' Swimming

This year's varsity boys' swimming and diving team finished third in the state. "We went into the season with a positive attitude and accomplished all the goals we had set for ouselves," said varsity Co-captain Chad Luning.

"All levels did really well and improved a lot since last year," explained varsity Coach Pat Sheehan. The JV team finished second in its league and the freshman team won its league. The diving teams also finished first.

"This year was the best ever for our diving teams," said Diving Coach Jim Blickenstaff.

"I think a lot of our success is due to the excellent coaching staff," said varsity diver David Serlin.

Both Coach Sheehan and Coach Blickenstaff won Coach of the Year Awards. "We pushed our athletes hard with double sessions starting the second week of school, and it really paid off," stated Sheehan.

JV swimmer Brian Hadden said, "We knew we had a strong team and were hoping to win a medal at the state finals."

"Having the state finals at the high school was a real advantage and helped us keep up our spirit," added Chad.

This year's season was filled with many highlights. According to Sheehan, some of the most memorable ones were "winning the 200-medley at state, Tom Henry's finishing #1 in state in diving, and beating New Trier."

"We are losing many of our top seniors for next year, but there are many good freshmen that will move up," said David. "If we work hard during the off-season, we should be able to do just as well next year," he continued.

Coach Sheehan stated, "Next year we are hoping to duplicate the great success of this year's season."

Girls' Swimming

The girls' very succcessful swiming/diving team not only had three senior varsity captains this year, but also a new, very-much-liked coach, Patrick Sheehan.

All three captains agree a good portion of their success was due to Coach Sheehan. "Coach Sheehan brought everyone together, as a team should be," said Captain Jennifer Zoltners.

Everyone is looking out for each other, not just themselves," agreed Captain Kristin Murphy.

The swimmers and divers weren't that close this year, as Captain Brigid O'Meara explained. "We (the swimmers) were busy doing our thing while they were doing theirs." Although they weren't that close, both teams did very well.

In all, nine girls went to state, and three qualified but didn't place. Debbie Wirth placed fourth in diving, while Michelle Russell placed second in the 100-yd. backstroke and sixth in the 200-yd. freestyle. Michelle Russell, Abigail Murray, Wendy Olson, and Jenny Cherto all placed fourth in the medley relay and got All State and All American. Evanston wound up placing sixth in state.

When asked what he thought about how the swimming/diving teams did, Coach Sheehan had only one word — "Outstanding."

Boys' Tennis

"People thought we would do worse this year, but we actually improved from last year," reflected Matt Tobin on the 1987 boys' tennis season.

A factor in the less than favorable prediction was that there was only one senior on the varsity team. Dan Malmed, the lone senior, expressed disappointment that other seniors didn't continue with the team.

However, this situation ended up having a positive effect on the team. Since most of the team were juniors, the members had much in common. Friendships grew and an important team unity developed.

Retiring coach Don Iverson explained, "I would have liked the team to have done better but we had some real tough competitors in our conference."

"Even though there were a few more elbow injuries and a persistently sprained ankle suffered by Marc Plonus, we had a good year," said Dan.

These problems were unable to permanently side track the team; and, bolstered by the performances of number one singles player Marc Plonus and number one doubles team Matt Tobin and Ivan Pavlovich, the varsity team place fourth in conference and third in sectionals.

"This year I had a real good group of fellows and they'll be even stronger next year with all the starters returning," concluded Coach Iverson.

Girls' Tennis

The girls' tennis team deserves a big round of applause for a fifth place at conference this year. Among other accomplishments, the varsity girls bought back an impressive third place from the Prospect Invitational and an incredible first place at the Fremd Invitational.

"Even though no one went to state this year, overall we played well as a team," said junior Melanie Bauer, who brought home a third place from conference.

The junior varsity team also experienced a good season, with an overall record of 5-4. Along with acquiring a pretty good record, the JV team also acquired a new coach, Lawrence Ware.

"JV really improved this year, but the one thing we were all excited about was Mr. Ware being our new coach," said sophomore Maeve O'Meara. "He even practiced with us, which made it even more fun."

"The girls had a successful year," said coach Ware. "They are positive, hard working, and have a great potential for developing an even greater tennis career, whether for leisure or for sport."

Joy Sclamberg, a team member, expressed her feelings about the team. "I feel it was the personalities of the team that came together as one and made it fun. If you don't win all the time, it's okay because you have something to fall back on: friendship."

Boys' Track

Successful track teams for the Wildkits aren't uncommon, and this year was no exception. The boys' team placed first in sectionals and seventh in state. Said Head Coach Willie May, "I'm pleased, but it's very hard not to be pleased." This was because of Evanston's results in the state meet. The team's emphasis was on the state meet, and they produced.

"We used the whole season to prepare for state. The regular meets were just to get ready," said senior Mike Jennings. The preparation paid off greatly for they placed second in the 3200m relay, first in the 1600m relay, and fourth in the 800m relay. It was no surprise to the Kits that the relay teams would excel. "It's pretty rare to have four guys running the same quarter-mile, and that's why we did well," said Mike, a member of the relay team.

"From last year's standpoint, we were more mature and had more upperclassmen," said Coach May. The team had no real superstar, so everyone worked together.

"We weren't outstanding individually, but we were tough collectively," Coach May added. That explains why the relays were so vital.

"We were definitely closer, and we depended on each other," Mike said. A good team works together, and that is exactly what the track team accomplished. Next year has a bright outlook to add to this year's achievements.

"We should do very well downstate next year," junior Chris Negrin said.

Coach May added, "We have many talented underclassmen."

The track team has proven that teamwork and unity can produce a winner. Hopefully the team can keep up the excellent work and run away with another great season.

Girls' Track

Although the girls' track team finished a very respectable third place in the entire state, many of the girls wanted to and thought they could win it all.

After concluding a great season, the Kits thought they had a great shot at competing for the top spot. A good mix of youth, talent, and leadership had the Kits looking strong going into the post-season. Coaches Frank May and Fred Spence were great motivators for the girls. They helped them through every nook and cranny to make them the best team possible. Sophomore hurdler and sprinter Erin Wright added, "Coach Spence was great, he helped us through hard times. He deserves much of the credit for our third-place finish."

The Kits have a continuous flow of underclassmen talent every year, and with many top runners returning next year, the girls' track team is looking up — to number one.

Boys' Volleyball

Mens' junior volleyball is a sport that is not widely recognized in Illinois. However, Evanston's Mens' Junior Volleyball Club has completed its third successful season.

When asked about the season and the future of the Mens' Junior Volleyball Club, team captain Tom Adamson remarked, "The Midwest has been slow to pick up volleyball for junior men, but hopefully our success around the country and internationally will spur other high schools in Illinois to encourage programs."

Competing under the name "Evanston Juniors," the varsity team started its summer season in 1986 by placing ninth in Nationals in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and third in AAU Junior Olympics at Illinois Benedictine College. During the late winter of 1987, the team placed second in the Canadian national Tournament. Spring travels included a trip to Pennsylvania which gave the team a second place in the Ferrill Invitational, and a trip to the Munciana Midwest Championship in Muncie, Indiana, where the team took first place.

Varsity team member Winfield Evens, a Junior, said, "Our success is due in a large part to the dedication of our coach, Gene Keefe. Unfortunately, we get little support from our school."

Another factor in the team's success was the freshman coach, Eric Winike. Brierly Anderson said, "Coach Winike was a great asset in helping us learn the game."

Out of over 70 people at the initial tryouts, more than half were cut. Out of the remaining thirty-plus people, only the varsity and junior varsity team members participated in more than one tournament. The main reasons for this were that there was little money for entry fees and there were only two other schools with men's junior volleyball. Also, the programs at Oak Park and Downers Grove South were about two years behind Evanston's club. Varsity team member David Muir remembered, "The varsity team wasn't even invited to the Oak Park Scrimmage."

When Keefe was asked how he felt about the future of the program, he said, "I am looking forward to mens' junior volleyball being a high school sport in the Midwest and Evanston being the main power for many years."

Girls' Volleyball

The varsity volleyball team ended their season with a disappointing 18-17 record, according to Coach Dee Ragalie. "We had the talent; we just couldn't pull together as a team," she commented. The team finished second in conference, taking a tough loss to Regina in the championship regional match. Three of the varsity players were all-conference: seniors Jonelle Niffenegger and Stephanie Brown, and junior Gretchen Rickman.

Coach Ragalie cites the team's spirit, athletic ability and experience as its strengths. "There is more depth and talent on the team than in the past," said Coach Ragalie.

Gretchen feels the balance of talent helps the team unity. "Because there's not one or two stars, it's more an all-around team effort," she said.

"The team spirit was a real motivater," Jonelle observed. "It helped us get through a lot of tough matches."

"This season was a lot of fun," said Gretchen. "We all got along and had a good time together."

Other levels fared well this year, with the junior varsity team winnining conference, finishing with a 15-3 record. "It was a great team effort," said co-captain Nancy Bragiel. Freshman A and B did well also, each finishing fourth in its respective conference.

Water Polo

After a winless season the previous year, the only place the Evanston water polo team could go was up. And they did just that. They broke the losing streak that haunted the pool for two years.

"It was a lot easier to win after the streak ended," senior Chad Luning claimed.

"We had a better attitude, once we broke it," senior Karl Kriegsmann admitted.

The hump was off their back, and they could concentrate on one of the roughest sports of the year. Junior Bob Jerkins agreed, "It's a rough sport because it's just you against your man."

Karl added that you need to use your "animal instincts."

Being a water sport, water polo does not involve padding or protection.

"The refs can't see much either because there is so much going on," Chad remarked. The year long close games and overtime excitement got the crowd involved, too.

"Especially the parents who really get into it," Karl said. Though the boys had a losing record, it was definitely a fun, promising year.

Overshadowed by the boys' team, Evanston girls' water polo was one of the few teams of its kind in the area.

Wrestling

We didn't win any wrestling championships this year, but it was a season of definite improvement and self-satisfaction. The varsity wrestlers improved their last year's record, a struggling 1-12, to a record of 9-7. They were tied for a second in the CSL. They also sent two wrestlers, Rich Bolich and Jack Taylor, to sectionals. They both lost close matches. Taylor had a simple explanation for the improvement; "We had more seniors wrestling."

Coach Elias George said, "Last year's wrestlers' experience helped. We could've won more matches if we had had better upper weight classes."

The Kits also had some trouble at their tournaments. They came in 10th place at Glenbrook South and Fenwick. The Kits also lost 65 to 0 at York. Sophomore Bert Ashbach felt they weren't "psychologically ready." Another sophomore Stuart Bailey stated, "Our leaders were gone. One was hurt, and the other lost a match."

We knocked off our rivals at New Trier though. "We were up for it. It was the 'big thing'", Ashbach added.

Coach George predicts, "We have eight starters returning including two from all-conference. If we get better upper weights, things should look good."

If all goes as expected for the '87-'88 season, we should be able to pin down another good season.

CROO FRONT ROW - Jenny Hay, Nana Thebus, John Liccardo, Nancy Mork, Kristin Visovatti; SECOND ROW - Joanna Gibbs, Eileen Russ, Luke Adams, Heather Sisk, Amy Rogers, Jessica Kysiak, Jason Thompson, Carla Cohen, Mike Two, Andy Liccardo, B.K. Croo doesn't mean very much to the majority of students at ETHS. The thought that occurs to most people when they see someone wearing a black t-shirt with "Croo" written across the front and a bizarre nickname like "Dude-Man" written across the back is probably something like, "Why can't these Upstairs Theater people learn how to spell?" Actually, Croo members are a very special part of the Upstairs Theater (regardless of their spelling talents). To be on Croo, a person must have crewed three shows. After crewing those three shows, they become "numbered," which means that they receive positions, such as Lighting Director or Head of Props, for a show.

But there is more to Croo than just being able to boss others around. According to Croo member John Liccardo, "Being numbered is a big deal because it makes you official, and it makes you feel more a part of everything and everyone. Croo is not just crew. It's more of a family. The people have known each other longer, so they're closer."

Another Croo member, Wynn Newberry, thinks that "Croo is exclusive. It's made up of people who are really into the whole thing."

All members of Croo are very dedicated to each production. For each show, they work every day after school and from 8:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. on Saturdays. They take care of the lighting and audio aspects of each show, and the props, but their main job is to build the set. There were some pretty elaborate sets this year. For example, for the winter play, Of Mice and Men, there was a stream with real water on the stage.

So why all this hard work and investment of time? Why do people join crew and then work three shows to be on Croo?

A great part of Croo seems to be the social aspects.

"People hear about it, and it's rumored to be a very good time," said John. "And it is."

Wynn mentioned set-building as another positive aspect of Croo. "After a hard day of mental stress, it's nice to work with your hands, and it's very satisfying when you can see some physical result of your work."

John summed up his feelings, "When you're on Croo, you work with a bunch of people who become almost like your second family. Croo gives you a feeling of accomplishment."

The Kite Club

It's time to go to your closets and dig out your kites. They're back! A club began in the fall of 1986 called The Kite Club. This small group meets Friday mornings before school and organizes kite flying escapades for Saturday afternoons. They try to fly out of the Northwestern landfill near the observatory. Senior Taka Nidaidoh, the "leader" of the high flyers, likes the spot. "It's a nice, big field with usually a strong wind."

Since the club relies on nice days, many activities are weather permitted. The club in strictly BYOK (bring your own kite), and they don't make kites. The 6 to 8 regulars don't mind that, though. Present members are mainly seniors, so the club's destiny is in the hands of the only sophomore, Kate Mdumby. "Hopefully, I can keep it going. Maybe I'll elect myself president," she added.

Both Kate and Taka agree that they have a good time regardless of the club's small size. "People think it's a joke, but I really like it. It's great relaxation," Taka stated.

In joining the Kite Club you learn about kites, relax a little, and have fun.

Amnesty International

When most people think of teenagers, they think of them as being interested only in parties and football games. But this is no longer the case. Many students have gained not only interest but also knowledge about the current situation of the world through a new club at ETHS: Amnesty International.

The club has about 70 members ranging from freshmen to seniors. AI is a world-wide organization which has over a half-million members. Ms. Paula Rance, a sponsor of AI, explained, "I think the group is good because it tries to deal with current events."

"The members write letters to government officials to try to free prisoners," stated Daina Jauntirans, a junior who is active in AI." They are in prison because of race, sex, creed, or language."

The club was started by seniors Wendy Tregay and Amy Valukas last year; they wanted to somehow help the outside world. Phil Roden, who also sponsors the club, said, "We try to free prisoners of conscience, as opposed to criminal. We've had a number of informational meetings and guest speakers from Northern Ireland, South Africa, El Salvador, and Peru."

"It is a very good place for students who want to know about the world around them and understand the foreign and domestic policy," explained Rance.

In November, Children of War came to Evanston and spent time with the AI group.

"These kids came from different war countries: Israel, Chile, Guatemala, Libya, and they spoke about their country, how they were treated," explained Daina. The Children of War were traveling all over the country and Evanston was just one of their stops.

"The main idea of AI is human rights and being protected all over the world," stated Rance.

AI has been in existence since 1961, and the headquarters are in London, England. "We've been successful," said Roden. "It's a long time, and with a half-million members all over the world, we've been successful."

Multi-Racial Unity Club

The Multi-Racial Unity Club is a welcome new addition to the long list of clubs at ETHS. Faculty supervisor Kathy Fischer held the first meeting in the spring of '86. Since then membership has steadily grown as students learn of the interesting discussions and activities the club sponsors.

The goal of the club is to bring students of different backgrounds together to increase and share their knowledge of certain countries. Jamaica, Central America, and Haiti are a few of the places that have been explored since some members are from those countries. Movies, refreshments, open debate, and free exchange of ideas are the main forms of entertainment. Junior Andrew Spaulding likes the club because, "I think the discussions are very interesting."

Willies

Many have asked, "Is that person in the furry costume really a student running around?" Yes, it is. In fact, the "Willie" sponsor, Sarah Goldberg, says that many Willies are actually very shy people. "When they put on the costume, no one knows who they are, so they can act as crazy as they want." There are no Willie practices. Everything is done spontaneously. Even the Willie himself or herself doesn't know exactly what they are going to do. The only restrictions are that they may not actually disrupt the cheerleaders; and they may not go onto the playing field during the game. They may not talk, but their actions usually compensate well.

About 20 people usually sign up to be Willies for the year. Only one or two are usually boys. Four different people act as Willie during a game, because the costume is too heavy and hot to wear for long periods of time. Willies can see through the eyes and mouth of the costume, but there is no peripheral vision. One or two of the Willies not in costume helps lead the other around.

Ms. Goldberg has sponsored the Willies for two years, and she says, "The kids are super!" Many come back year after year, because it's an activity everyone can participate in while still doing other activities. Being a Willie is a unique activity and a time when one can be oneself without anyone knowing who is in the costume.

Thank you to all the editors: Vicky, Jonelle, Erica, Shari, and Sarah. You guys did a great job on your sections. Thanks to all the photographers, especially Aaron, for taking all those pictures during the last week of school, and Larry for your organized negatives. Thanks Erica and Amie for doing such a great job on all the stories. Special thanks goes to Mimi and Liz for taking turns at being Sports Editor. Thanks to everyone who worked on the yearbook whether they were on the staff or not. Even though we never met a deadline, we all had a great time trying.

A huge thank you to Erica Michael, Jonelle Niffenegger, Christina Mueller, Karie Rubin, and Marcy Shure for sacrificing time in August to create the academics section from scratch.

Thanks Mr. Roth for always being there and having an answer to every question. And thanks Mr. Moorhead for all your help with the cover.
